4. DISCUSSION ITEMS

a. Albany Story - themes that can be used for creating public art.

Linda spoke with a staff member of Burcham's Metals and he expressed interest in the possibility of participating in a sculpture project. Ed noted that John Boock and Jay Burcham have been invited to attend a Commission meeting to further discuss the project.

Chuck asked if there was any new information about creating a plaque in tribute to Samuel Simpson, Oregon's first poet laureate, which would tie into the Albany Story project. The Commission needs the museum to submit a proposal for review and take any action if needed.

Chuck previously informed the Commission about Edward Loy, who is currently writing a book on the history of Albany, might be a useful resource. He has since spoken with Loy about and discussed the possibility of having a paragraph in his book about the Arts Commission. Ed Hodney suggested inviting a representative from the Albany Regional Museum to a meeting to further discuss the objectives of the Arts Commission regarding the Albany Story.

d. Co-op Gallery

Billie requested clarification regarding the Co-op and the role of the Arts Commission. Ed responded stating the two entities are separate and will not be linked. Any artist contact information the Arts Commission has will not be used to solicit for the gallery.

e. Other

Ed has been communicating with a few photographers and there is a growing interest a juried photography show, possibly in 2014, exhibiting in City Hall.

Lynn suggested creating a calendar listing on the Arts Commission web page for events, shows, and gallery locations. Ed noted that the Albany Visitors Association (AVA) is currently maintaining a calendar of events for the local region, and suggested placing a link on the Arts Commission page to AVA's site instead of trying to maintain a separate calendar. If the Commission does want a separate event calendar, a process would need to be established for maintaining it and providing new information.
